IMPORTANCE OF VALUE EDUCATION

Education is a lifelong process and one's personality development starts from school. Schools build the base for a student's future. This is why it is said that schools play a significant role in providing value education or moral education. All schools and even a few colleges have separate classes for value education. Value education aims at training the children to face the outer world with the right values and attitude. This is a process of the overall personality development of a student. Character development, personality development, citizenship development, and spiritual development form part of value education. Some people think values are an inborn character of a child and can never be developed. But, this is not true. A good school and value education sessions can change the character of a person drastically. No one can deny the role which parents play in shaping the character and personality of their child. Here are few tips to groom them well.

- Helps build a positive character with traits such as compassion, respect, kindness and humility.
- Makes the child distinguish between right and wrong or good and bad. It can eventually promote rational thinking and unbiased judgment.
- Provides a perspective that shapes attitudes and beliefs towards various aspects of life.
- Boosts their self-confidence and helps them stay positive even in difficult situations.
- Allows children to channelize their energies in the right direction.
- Works as a moral compass that helps them stay off the negative influence of peers, social media, or society in general, as they grow into teens or adults.
- Be their role model: Preaching a child is of no use unless you practice what you preach. Children learn better by observing their environment. Set a good example by following virtues, such as honesty, humility, responsibility, and compassion.
- Share moral experiences: Moral bedtime stories on topics such as honesty, justice, being helpful, etc., are good, but sharing positive real-life experiences is even better. share such incidents from your life experiences to acquaint your child with those morals.
